

SIUE Library and Information Services Spring Symposium 2014

“Here Today, Here Tomorrow: Preserving Digital Content for the Future ”

Friday, April 4, 1:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.

Southern Illinois University Edwardsville (SIUE)
Lovejoy Library, Third Floor Conference Room

This workshop session is designed for those who are beginning to think about incorporating digital preservation strategies into their practice and for those at the early stages of grappling with digital preservation issues. Librarians and curators of digitized collections, researchers with born-digital scholarship, and individuals with personal digital files will all benefit from this interactive overview.

Andrew Huot is the Conservator and Preservation Specialist at Illinois State University. He also teaches Preservation and Conservation for the School of Library of Information Science at the University of Illinois.

Mary Rose is the Metadata Librarian at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville’s Lovejoy Library. She provides metadata for digital objects and designs collection webpages and search features.

Laurie Sauer has been the Information Technologies Librarian at Knox College since 1996. She has developed and managed Knox College's digital collections since 2009.
